Please select three among books recommended at end of the syllabus. If you select a very lengthy work, for example, The Power Broker, it may count as two or even three books.

Roles

Depending on class size, we will form a mock Michigan State Senate or another state policy making set of leaders.

Exams and Writing Assignments

There are no exams. There may be a couple of one-page writing assignments and an op ed. I may assign additional writing assignments to students needing help.

Expectations

Participants will participate. They will voice opinions; present facts; research policy options; against their better nature, argue for policies with which they disagree; be superb team members; and be irreverent. Attendance weekly is a big deal. Missing even one class harms the group. Due to poor health, conflicting opportunities, or emergencies, you may request an excused absence. A couple of or more absences may influence your final grade, not in a good way.

What is essential is that students attend the second class. We are building a mock state legislative body. Seats, partisanship, and policy leaders' roles must be assigned on the second week of class. By all means, shop and drop; but please make that decision no later than September 10.

Forewarning

This course has a non-linear flow. It is fluid, replete with changes in assignments. If you are highly structured and purely analytical, this is probably not your cup of tea. Neither is the class a shout-out to individualists, as much work is done in teams. The emphasis on career skills, including networking, self-marketing, media training, and entrepreneurship, may discomfort. You may find this course the most anti-theoretical class that you've taken.

Too, there will be intense role-playing, with constituents' interests and party discipline at the forefront. In a state legislature, most policy is developed and refined in closed-door partisan caucuses, which will be central to our study of state policy.

Students with Disabilities

If you believe that you need an accommodation for a disability, please let me know at your earliest convenience. Some aspects of this course may be modified to facilitate your participation and progress. As soon as you make me aware of your needs, I will work with the Office of Services for Students with Disabilities to help determine appropriate accommodations. I will treat any information that you provide as confidential.
